Why Your Organisation Belongs Here

SA–Russia Trade Week 2026 is not a conference. It is the opening chapter of a decade-long bilateral trade architecture — and the organisations that participate in the founding edition will have preferential positioning in every subsequent deal, introduction, and platform that Studex Global Markets builds.

The Platform Advantage

Studex Global Markets operates at the intersection of AI, agriculture, e-commerce, and diplomatic commerce. With over 14 years of AI application experience and a decade of formal registration, Studex is uniquely positioned to serve as the operating layer for Africa–Russia trade. The Studex Super Agent — premiering at this event — will automate trade workflows, certifications, logistics, and payments across the SA–Russia corridor.

First-Mover Advantage

The SA–Russia trade relationship is structurally underserved. With Western companies retreating from the Russian market, African enterprises — particularly South African ones — have an unprecedented opportunity to occupy market positions that were previously closed. The organisations at this table in June 2026 will define the rules of engagement for a bilateral trade relationship that could reach $10B+ within a decade.

The Network Effect

Your participation connects you to every other organisation in this proposal — from Wildberries and Ozon on one side to NDA, Stitch, and Shopify on the other. Studex facilitates multi-party deal structures where your investment or participation multiplies in value through the relationships you gain access to at the event.

The Cultural Capital

Through IBA boxing partnerships, the Mandela African Boxing Cup, media coverage on RT and Sputnik, and cultural programming, this event carries soft-power currency that no boardroom meeting can replicate. Your brand will be seen alongside heads of state delegations, Olympic athletes, and AI pioneers.
